Rupert Brooke (August 3, 1887 April 23, 1915) was a British poet best known for his idealistic War Sonnets written during the First World War.

But somewhere, beyond Space and Time, is wetter water, slimier slime! And there (they trust) there swimmeth one who swam ere rivers were begun, immense of fishy form and mind, squamous omnipotent, and kind.

- Brooke, Rupert

Stands the Church clock at ten to three? And is there honey still for tea?

- Brooke, Rupert

If I should die, think only this of me: that there's some corner of a foreign field that is for ever England.

- Brooke, Rupert

Infinite hungers leap no more I in the chance swaying of your dress; and love has changed to kindness.

- Brooke, Rupert

All the little emptiness of love!

- Brooke, Rupert

The cool kindness of sheets, that soon smooth away trouble; and the rough male kiss of blankets.

- Brooke, Rupert

A book may be compared to your neighbor: if it be good, it cannot last too long; if bad, you cannot get rid of it too early.

- Brooke, Rupert

Oh! death will find me long before I tire of watching you.

- Brooke, Rupert

Cities, like cats, will reveal themselves at night.

- Brooke, Rupert

If I should die, think only this of me: That there's some corner of a foreign field That is for ever England.
